Safety measures:

Public invited to discussion of risks, precautions at local ammonia plant

The public is invited to a risk management plan meeting for Prodica (the former Unocal facility near the Port of Sacramento), which has two 138-foot diamater tanks for storing refrigerated anhydrous ammonia, and also deals with other hazardous materials. Each can hold up to 20,000 short tons of the substance. The facility brings in anhydrous ammonia and urea to make fertilizer products, and loads and off-loads by barge, truck and rail.

The facility is located on Channel Dr. and the two white tanks are a familiar landmark to West Sacramentans.

Prodica is a limited liability corporation which took over operations of the West Sacramento facility and its sister facilities in Oregon and Washington in October.

The risk management plan includes information on how hazardous materials are managed at the plant, worst case and alternate case accident risks, and emergency response plans. The meeting will be held Jan. 27 at 7 p.m. in building "B" of the Yolo Co. services center, Triangle Ct. west of Jefferson.

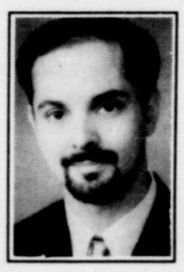
The company requests that, as a courtesy, residents who expect to attend the meeting call Jeff Grussing at 375-6111 so that the meeting can be better accommodated.

Facility manager Hoss Johnson reports that, as part of the company's emergency preparedness, the company holds annual training sessions with the hazardous material team of the West Sacramento Fire Dept. and sponsors training for fire personnel as well.

The new plan is not yet available for review; local government agencies couldn't immediately locate copies of the former Unocal risk management plan for the plant.

Regulating 'live-aboard' boaters —

At the request of Mayor Cabaldon, the West Sacramento City Council will tonight consider adoption of an "urgency ordinance" regulating boats which anchor for extended periods of time in City of West Sacramento waters. The measure prohibits anchorage by "unseaworthy" vessels and makes it unlawful for boats to discharge sewage, garbage or bilgewater. The ordinance would also make it illegal for a boat to anchor at one location for more than six hours per day over a 30-day period without a permit.



CHRISTOPHER CABALDON
West Sacramento Mayor

The police department will be able to issue a permit if it determines the vessel to be safe, and to have appropriate sewage retaining equipment.

The "urgency" ordinance is intended to deal with an increase in unsafe or polluting boats anchoring on West Sacramento's side of the river -- particularly in the south, near the former Four Seasons Marina -- following a crackdown by Sacramento authorities, said a city staff report on the subject.

"It appears that some of the blighted houseboats affected by the (Sacramento) ordinance have relocated to waterways within the city of West Sacramento," said the report by Assistant City Manager Carol Richardson.

It wasn't immediately clear if the city ordinance would apply to live-aboard boats at the Port of Sacramento, which is part of a federally authorized port district within city limits. The port's turning basin has been a popular anchorage for "live-aboards."

The ordinance refers to waterways within the city's jurisdiction; one city official told the News-Ledger last week that it was yet to be determined if the port's waterways were under that jurisdiction.

Proposed 'welcome' sign for Park/Jefferson

The West Sacramento City Council on Wednesday will take another step in its process of choosing "gateway" signs for each main point of entry into the city.

Working with property owner Caltrans, the council will be asked to improve an $18,000 monument sign project for the northwest corner of Jefferson and Park boulevards. The low-slung concrete sign will feature the city's logo plus a "Welcome to the City of West Sacramento" message.

A variety of other options will also be submitted to the council for possible selection.

The council meeting will begin at 7 p.m. at Yolo High School.

Insurance, parking permit required

Pay attention or get towed: new RCHS parking policy

By Daryl Fisher
Features Editor

By January 25, River City High School will have completed the implementation of a new parking permit policy. This policy will require all staff members, students, and outside resource personnel to obtain and display a parking permit in their car in order to park on campus. River City students will be required to complete a parking permit form, provide proof of a valid driver's license and proof of insurance to obtain their parking permits. The parking permit forms for students have been available in the River City office since January 3, 2000.

"The new parking permit policy is part of a comprehensive campus safety improvement program we are implementing," explained River City Assistant Principal Cindy Moody-Perkins. "The State of California has provided us with some new funding for safety improvements and we have set up a committee to find out how parents, teachers and students think we can best use that money."

Moody-Perkins added that the safety concerns which are currently being examined at the high school range all the way from improving on-campus fire and disaster drills to getting a better handle on drug abuse problems and gang activities. "The goal is to make River City the safest possible campus we can," said Moody-Perkins, "and we're convinced that putting the new parking permit policy in place is going to be a good step in the right direction. In addition to making sure we know exactly who is parking their cars on our campus, we also want our students to be properly licensed and insured in case of accidents."

Cars parked on the River City campus without a valid parking permit after January 25, 2000 will be subject to a citation or being towed away at the owner's expense.

For better service to students:

School board votes to add fourth counselor for RCHS

With a 4-0 vote, the Washington Unified School District on Thursday approved an additional guidance counselor position at River City High School.

The fourth counselor will bring the student-to-counselor ratio down from about 500:1 to about 370:1, reports school board vice president Dave Farmer.

"There was a need there," said Farmer, who presided over the meeting in the absence of board president Ardeene Westvik. "I believe we were out of compliance with the contract we had with ithe WTA (Washington Teachers Association), but there was also a need based on what we had been told by the other counselors. We need to work closely with the students."

Voting for the measure were Farmer and fellow members Ed Hocking, Pat Flint and Irene Eklund.

This week in local government —

The elementary school boundary task force of the Washington Unified School District will meet on Wed., Jan. 19, at 6 p.m. on Southport Elementary School (2747 Linden Rd.).

The Sacramento-Yolo Port District will hold a special meeting on Thurs., Jan. 20, from 9 a.m. to 1 p.m. at 3251 Beacon Blvd.

Among the agenda items is a closed session discussion of "specific approach for performance planning system for the port director."

The West Sacramento planning commission will meet at 6 p.m. on Thurs., Jan. 20. Call 373-5854 to confirm time and location.

Agenda items include election of new chairman, vice chairman and secretary; approval of a parcel split for property owned by Loren Ishii at 4590 South River

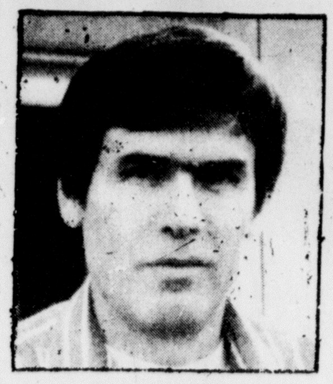
There's always a reward for facing up to your fears

My Back Pages



By Daryl Fisher

A couple of months ago, my daughter dropped by the house to proudly announce that she was going to make her first trip to Europe.

"But you're scared to death of flying in airplanes," I reluctantly reminded her. "Just how do you plan on getting there?"

"By drinking a whole lot of wine before I get on the plane," she answered matter-of-factly.

As it turned out, she had been offered a deal no one in their right mind could have turned down. More specifically, she and a bunch of her college friends had signed up for a program offered by the school which allowed them to purchase non-refundable round-trip tickets to Europe for less than $300 a person. The catch was that they had to travel in January, which is the off-season for European tourism and also usually the coldest month of the year in the two countries where they were going to spend most of their time, France and England.

"It still sounds like a great deal to me," I told her. "Go for it!"

"I can hardly wait!", she exclaimed bravely.

But as my daughter's departure date slowly began to get closer and closer, I starting receiving more and more anxious telephone calls from her.

"I just finished watching a news program about all the airplanes that keep falling out of the sky when they fly out over the ocean just after they take off from New York City to go to Europe," she said over the phone one evening with obvious worry in her voice. "They even think somebody might be shooting missiles at them."

"No one is going to shoot a missile at your airplane," I assured my daughter.

"And what if I get one of those crazy pilots like that guy from Egypt who decided to fly his airplane into the sea and commit suicide the other day?" she asked me with concern. "There were hundreds of innocent people on that plane."

"Carrie," I said as calmly as I could, "for every one person who dies in an airplane, another million people who travel by air make it to where they're going safely. And that's a fact."

"Are you absolutely sure about that?"

"Yes."

"You better not be lying to me!"

The above conversation was then soon followed by another which started out, "Dad, a bunch of crazy terrorists just hijacked a plane in India and they're threatening to kill all the passengers!"

"Carrie, you're not going to India. Would you just try and relax. Take my word for it, your flight to Europe is going to be completely uneventful."

"But the only thing that would be worse than being blown up by a missile would to be kidnapped by a bunch of crazy terrorists."

"No one is going to kidnap you."

"You don't know that for sure!" she said with emphasis. "You're only guessing!"

Anyway, just when I thought the phone calls from my daughter had stopped, I got another one informing me that everyone in Europe was dying of the flu.

"Just listen to this," said my daughter, reading from a newspaper article. "Overburdened British hospitals have canceled operations to make room for flu victims. Parts of Europe have been hit extremely hard by influenza in the past few weeks and British Health Secretary Alan Milburn said yesterday that if the outbreak didn't peak soon, Britain could be heading for the worst epidemic in recent memory. Officials are clearing out all sorts of places, cafeterias and offices, so they can admit as many patients as possible."

"Just drink plenty of juices and wash your hands a lot when you're there," I suggested.

"And something else," quickly added my daughter, "now they're telling us that our San Francisco flight is flying into Newark, New Jersey instead of New York City."

"So what's wrong with that?"

"Don't you know what they call Newark, New Jersey?"

"What"

"The murder capitol of the whole United States!"

Believe it or else, my only daughter did manage to get to Europe, although she called a few days ago from France to say that her pilot had spent the whole flight apologizing to the passengers for all the unexpected turbulence and that her palms hadn't stopped sweating until the plane finally landed on the good earth.

"Just where exactly are you calling from," I yelled into the phone, barely able to hear her.

"From the Louvre!" she hollered back, her voice filled with an excitement that only comes from having faced down one's fears. "And Dad," she added, "guess what?"

"What?"

"I just saw the Mona Lisa!"

The Sacramento Kings (23-12) continue to win at home improving to 14-2 and putting them 11 games over .500 for the first time since the 1979 Kansas City Kings. The Kings won their fifth in row and seventh consecutive game at the friendly confines of Arco Arena. Looks like the Kings are turning their season around winning 11 of their last 13 games after a brief losing streak. The Kings had better lock up some wins this home stand against the Clippers, Magic and the Jazz because they hit the road for long eight game trip that will starts on January 25th in Charlotte and ends on February 6th against the 76ers on NBC TV (12:30 a.m.). Speaking of TV, the Kings will be featured for the first time in team history on a regular-season game on the NBC Saturday afternoon telecast (3 p.m.) at the Arco Arena against their old playoff rival, the Utah Jazz.

The Super Bowl in just two weeks away and only four teams remain in the hunt for the Lombardi Trophy. I was right on the money when I picked the Jaguars to blow out the Fish, but 62-7! The 55-point margin of victory was only second in the NFL history books. In 1940 the Bears routed the Redskins 73-0. I also picked the Miracle Titans over the Colts but even though I picked Tampa Bay beat Washington they failed to cover the spread. I really missed on the Rams and Vikings game, so my season record stands at 29 wins, 24 losses, and 1 tie. I still can't believe Rams and Vikings combined for over 800 total offense yards! The Conference Championships are always tough to pick but in the AFC I like the Jags to finally find a way to beat the Titans (+7) but the points are just too much against the Miracle workers from Tennessee. Jacksonville 24 - Tennessee 23.

In the NFC, I would have picked the Bucs against the Vikings but after watching the Rams demolish the Vikings, I have to go with St. Louis. The Rams and their MVP quarterback, Kurt Warner, remind me of the 49ers when a young Joe Montana could light up the scoreboard at will. The Rams seemed to be destined to bring the City of St. Louis their first NFC Championship and a chance at the final dance at Super Bowl XXXIV on January 30th in Atlanta. But even with all that offensive power staring me in the face I think the Buccaneers (+14), lead by Warren Sapp and the stingiest defense in the NFC will keep the game close. Tampa Bay's offense will huddle up in the loud and hostile Trans World Dome in St. Louis and will be lead by rookie QB Shawn King. I'll take the Bucs defense and the two touchdowns! St. Louis 28 - Tampa Bay 17.

Diego Corrales, Sacramento's IBF junior-lightweight champion, struck gold again by signing a contract for $350,000 to defend his crown on March 18th in Las Vegas. Corrales could have avoided fighting Derrick Gainer (33-4, 21 KO's), who is the IBF's No. 1 ranked contender, for another six months but Corrales truly believes that to be the best you must fight the best!

Can you believe it! It's just little the old days when champions always fought the top contenders. That's why Diego will be crowd favorite and a true boxing champion. Corrales will share the spot light on HBO's doubleheader with WBC champion Floyd Mayweather Jr. against the No. 1 challenger, Goyo Vargas of Mexico. The winners of this boxing night of champions will probably meet for another big payday! Promoter Don Chargin plans a featuring Horatio Garcia of Sacramento (10-2-1, 7 KO's) against Carlos Rubio (23-4-2, 8 KO's) of Mexico, in a 12-round main event for the vacant IBA welterweight title on Friday, January 21st at the Feather Falls Casino in Oroville.

A five-bout under card with Sacramento featherweight Rene Silva starts at 7 p.m. with tickets priced at $30, $40 and $45.

See ya next week!!

OPINION

News-Ledger Editorial

Best place in West Sac to multi-task?

Once in awhile, we ought to take a moment to recognize a place that provides one of the best kept secets in West Sacramento; an institution taken for granted to such a degree that it is used only to a small part of its potential.

It's the place to go to find no-cost entertainment, learn a skill or hobby, research a school project, educate yourself in a new language, plan investments, check up on local government, borrow a movie video and (soon) access the internet. It offers all of these things completely free.

Stumped?

You probably wouldn't think of it as your first choice for any of these things, but it could be. The library has all these things and more, and yet we take it for granted: does everyone in your family have a library card and use it regularly?

Another well-kept secret is the library's periodic book sales (one of which is scheduled for this weekend). If there's some book you've been meaning to buy and read, this is a great opportunity.

The book sale is organized by the East Yolo Friends of the Library (another well-kept secret), who labor year round to raise money to support library programs.

Both the library and the book sale are worth a get-acquainted visit -- or even a "get re-acquainted" visit.

Commentary from Senator Boxer:

Martin Luther King, Jr., deserves a monument in D.C.

By Barbara Boxer
U.S. Senator from California

As we celebrate Martin Luther King Day, plans are in the works to create a national monument to Dr. King, one of the great moral leaders of our nation's history.

Last month the U.S. Commission on Fine Arts gave preliminary approval for the site and size of the monument. This month the Commission and the King National Memorial Project Foundation are developing further guidelines for judging design proposals, which will be submitted this spring.

The King Memorial will be erected on the National Mall near the new monument to President Franklin D. Roosevelt. The site is halfway between the memorials to Thomas Jefferson, who wrote the Declaration of Independence, and Abraham Lincoln, who wrote the Emancipation Proclamation. The Lincoln Memorial was the site of the 1963 March on Washington, where Dr. King delivered his immortal "I Have a Dream" speech.

Dr. King's dream was, as he said, deeply rooted in the American dream: "that one day this nation will rise up and live out the true meaning of its creed: 'We hold these truths to be self-evident, that all men are created equal.'"

Across the Potomac River in Arlington National Cemetery are more monuments, the graves of men and women who died in the service of our nation. Robert F. Kennedy's grave site is inscribed with words from his extemporaneous eulogy of Dr. King, delivered just two months before Kennedy himself was assassinated.

"What we need in the United States in not division. What we need in the United States is not hatred. What we need in the United States is not violence or lawlessness, but love and wisdom and compassion toward one another, and a feeling of justice toward those who still suffer within our country whether they be white or they be black. Let us dedicate ourselves to what the Greeks wrote so many years ago: To tame the savageness of man and make gentle the life of this world."

In his most famous speech, Dr. King set the moral agenda of an era with his call to fulfill the promise of Lincoln's Emancipation Proclamation and Jefferson's Declaration of Independence, which he called "a promissory note to which every American was to fall heir."

He challenged America to honor its sacred obligation and give all its citizens the inalienable rights of life, liberty, and the pursuit of happiness.

Like Lincoln, Dr. King gave his life to make America a land of liberty and justice for all. And like Lincoln, Jefferson and FDR, he deserves to be honored with a monument on the main street of American democracy, the National Mall.

Attention WUSD employees

Last week I was informed that our school district does not pay state disability. Now, to those of you who work for the district and read your entire employee handbook, this may not come as a surprise. Unfortunately, I, like many others I'm sure, did not and found out the hard way. Even though days before I went on leave I had mentioned it to numerous co-workers, spoken many times to the district office, and even went in and asked for the disability forms (which they didn't have). Not one person mentioned to me that the district doesn't pay it. I have since talked to some friends in the district and they, too, were not aware of this. What I have recently been told is that I should have purchased what's called "income protection" through American Fidelity Assurance Company. So let this letter serve as "FYI" to those of you out there also unaware, and I'm sure there's many of you. Contact American Fidelity and gets yourself covered before it's too late.

Change immigration policy

It has become clear apparently that our immigration policy needs to be over hauled. We can no longer afford the tremendous influx of immigrants, legal and illegal, taxing our facilities to the breaking point, and bringing in diseases.

I propose that we close our borders for a couple of years, or longer, until a satisfactory quota can established. In the mean time lets round up all the illegal, and also any immigrant who feels our laws are something to be violated, and ship them back to where they came from.

I, for one, am sick and tired of reading about recently arrived immigrants breaking our law's and abusing our system; if they are coming over here and abusing, the system, or doing things against our laws, lets ship them back. Let us spend this money on our own suffering senior citizens medication and health care.

Prisons need to improve

RE:CYA woes (Bee, 1/8/00): Why has California Youth Authority changed from goal of rehabilitation to goal of punishment? I worked at CYA central office from 1963-77 when rehab was the goal, but it seemed like we had a high rate of recidivism. Young offenders weren't learning their lessons, so it seemed. Or maybe they were treated better in the institution than they were outside.

Late last year on ABC's Nightline, Ted Koppel gave a 4-part presentation from within one of our state's women's prisons, painting the same picture: No training, just $200 to cover rent, food and other expenses. What a sad joke. No wonder more than 90% returned to a life of crime. Probably the same happens for those released from CYA.

Twice earlier while at bus stops, I had guys ask me for money, claiming they were just released from prison. No training, just the $200, they claimed. Now I believe them.

Since neither just being nice nor outright punishment seems to be the correct formula for the younger nor the adult offenders and since we expect all to succeed once we release them, why not use a combination formula: Punish them for their crimes, but train them to succeed once we release them. It seems like our State Dept. of Social Services could and should assist CYA and Dept. of Corrections to achieve these goals.

Finally, this note: About five years ago, a prison guard who worked where state handles handicapped wrongdoers told me that inmates deliberately commit crimes because they fell more secure inside than they do on the outside. What more does that tell us?

VOLSTEAD LAW HAS NOT SHUT DOWN BOOZE IN WOODLAND

Woodland, Feb. 1.—Mrs. Lulu Clara Gray filed a divorce complaint in the superior court late yesterday against J. F. Gray of Woodland, an accountant and clerk.

Habitual intemperance is the ground for the divorce proceedings. The couple was married in El Paso, Texas, in 1911. They have resided in Yolo county for the past three years. There are no children and property interests have been settled out of court. Just a plain divorce is asked. There will be no contest. Hurst and Hurst are the attorneys.

The claim is made that Lake Louise in Canada will be dry in a thousand years.

How foolish.

Canada is now floating on a foundation of booze that bringe millions of revenue from the United States.

HORST WAREHOUSE BURGLARIZED BY DRUG ADDICTS

Next Monday afternon at 2 p. m. Lewis B. Wells and George Dixon will have their preliminary examination in Judge Barry's court on the charge of having broken into the Horst warehouse in West Sacramento and stolen many valuables.

When arrested by the Sacramento police on descriptions furnished by Constable Buckingham they had several articles on their persons taken from the premises.

They were arrested by Detectives E. M. Brown, Frank McAllister and Verne Dill and taken to the city jail. With Dixon was Lewis P. Wells, believed to be his accomplice, in whose possession was found a quantity of children's clothing believed to have been stolen from the Weinstock-Lubin Co. store.

Dixon protested his innocence when arrested but upon being searched admitted the theft. The stamps were of denominations ranging from 3 to 50 cents. The arrests were made at Fifth and K streets.

Two motormeters were found in Lewis' possession, believed to have been stolen from automobiles. Both mare are said to be drug addicts.

JAPANESE WIN LAND SUIT FROM WEST SACRAMENTO OWNERS

Woodland, Jan. 28.—Judge Ernest Weyand of Colusa sititing in place of Judge Charles O. Busick, handed down a decision yesterday in the suit brought by four Japanese against J. H. Glide, P. C. Drescher, Charles H. Crocker and Charles Sutro, San Francisco, of the West Sacramento Land Company, in favor of the Japanese—granting judgment in the sum of $1157. The suit was recovery of the amount of judgment paid upon a contract of agreement on a lease for Yolo county agricultural land to run for a period of three years.

GROTE'S CITIZENSHIP IS QUESTIONED IN GHELFI'S APPLICATION

Failing to qualify to the satisfaction of Judge Anderson, John Grote, appearing last Mouday in Woodland as a witness for Peter Ghelfi, was the means of delaying the granting of citizenship to Ghelfi.

During many years Grote has exercised all the privileges of U. S. citizenship, having voted at all elections and registered whenever necessary.

He claimed that right because of his father's citizenship, who became a citizen of the U. S. and because Grote came to this country before he was 18 years of age.

The claim was made last Monday that he must produce his father's papers in order to qualify as a witness for Ghelfi.

Grote became indignant when questioned as to his own citizenship. He claimed to have been given papers. He later told Examiner Chester Ball and Judge William A. Anderson that his papers had been lost.

The court told Grote to submit proof of citizenship at another hearing on June 8th. On this date Gehlfi will take his examination if Grote can satisfy the examiner and Judge that he (Grote) is entitled as an American citizen to be a sponsor or witness.

S. P. EMBANKMENT STRENGTHENED AGAINST EROSION

Carpenters and concrete workers have been strengthening the S. P. embankment under the lower end off the approach to the bridge during the past week.

This became necessary of late because surface water was washing away the foundation and if permitted to continue might result in breaks in the concrete surfacing of the bridge.

One more necessary improvement that should be made at this point is the widening of the entrance to the approach.

It would cost little and be of great benefit to travelers, especially strangers who are not acquainted with the roadway.

The bidding:

Pass	Pass	Dble

Opening lead — jack of spades.

This deal occurred in the semifinals of the 1989 Vanderbilt team championship. Both Souths wound up in four hearts doubled, a contract where declarer seems certain to lose three hearts and a spade for down one. However, one of the declarers found a way to get home with 10 tricks.

At the first table, the bidding went as shown. East's two-heart bid showed length in spades and diamonds, after which North leaped aggressively to four hearts.

South won West's jack of spades lead with the ace, led a heart to the queen and played the ten of spades. This was covered by the queen and king and ruffed by West, who shifted to the diamond king. Declarer took the ace, ruffed a diamond and conceded a spade to East's nine. West could not be denied the A-J of trumps, so South finished down one, -200.

At the second table, where Bobby Wolff was declarer, East also showed a spade-diamond two-suiter during the auction. But here Wolff took better advantage of what he had learned from the bidding.

West led a low diamond. Wolff won with the ace, ruffed a diamond, led a heart to the queen and ruffed another diamond. Then, utilizing his knowledge of the opposing distribution, he cashed the ace of clubs and finessed the ten. When East showed out and couldn't ruff, another club was led to the jack, and the king was cashed.

Wolff next led a spade to the king, which gave him the first nine tricks. He then played the ace of spades, ruffed by West with the ten. Wolff still had the K-7 of hearts (and a spade) at this point, so he could not be prevented from scoring his king of hearts regardless of what West returned.

Making four hearts doubled was worth 790 points. Added to the 200 points gained by his teammates at the other table, this gave Wolff's team a 14-IMP pickup on the deal.

Books by Ralph Hollenbeck

"You've come a long way, baby" is a slogan that serves New York City about as well as a certain commercial product. As the city approaches its 400th anniversary, old Gotham as one of the world's major cities - if not THE true capital of the world — has a lot to be proud of.

NEW YORK: An Illustrated History, by Ric Burns & James Sanders; picture editor Lisa Ades (Knopf: $60.00), illuminates how a small Dutch settlement on Manhattan's tip has grown into a skyscraping metropolis. This companion volume for the PBS series captures the dynamism that has marked the city from its origins as a fur trading post to the world's commercial capital of today. The Burns/Sanders' narrative and Ades' appropriate illustrations highlight how The Big Apple has outgrown and overshadowed other world urban centers in far less time.

BERENICE ABBOTT: Changing New York, by Bonnie Yochelson velously complements any history of the ever-transforming city. Drawing on Museum of the City of New York files, it freezes in time 1930s New York. Abbott, a transplanted Midwesterner, recorded for a Works Project Administration's (WPA) project sections of New York that have been demolished and built over in post-World War II's expansive years. Many may still recall the crusty charms of Abbott's scenes, which often held more gracious appeal than their steel and glass successors

Both old and young readers will be fascinated and delighted by THE NEW YORK POP-UP BOOK, by Marie Salerno with consultant Arthur Gelb (Universe/Rizzoli: $39.95), a commemorative volume of the city's centennial filled with textual and artistic impressions by such as Tom Wolfe, Calvin Trillin, et al., along with all manner of inserts. An Al Hirschfeld show drawing in 3-D is worth the price alone.

Carl Rowan's Commentary

A CENTURY CHANGING THE HUMAN CONDITION

WASHINGTON — What a century of change it has been!

On this last day of the 1900s, it is truly astonishing to look back and realize how much these last hundred years have changed the human condition.

A boy born in the United States a century ago could expect to live only to the age of 46, a girl to 48. Unless they were black, in which case life expectancy was 33 years. A boy born now can expect to live to age 74, a girl to age 79 — but many, many of both will live past 100.

That is because, in this century, man has made some killer diseases go the way of the bubonic plague.

I have lived only three-fourths of the 20th century, but I remember many deaths during childbirth. I recall childhood pals dying of diphtheria, tuberculosis, polio, "sugar diabetes" and other ailments and afflictions that medicine and science have abolished or brought under control.

Few people in my childhood would have imagined that I would see doctors open chests and replace arteries, substitute pig tissue for a heart valve or simply replace a heart, kidney or other organs.

Now, at the century's end, as men race to sequence the human genome and to understand gene and protein functions, the prospect of sensational new medical advances is great.

We aren't just living longer; we are living infinitely better.

The average American family of 1900 had an income of about $3,000 a year in today's dollars, and that family had no telephone, no radio, no television, no automobile, no refrigerator and no indoor plumbing. The average household today has $45,000 in income and owns a car or two, stationary and cell phones, radios and television sets, plus computers.

We live better partly because we learned to control our numbers. The average American household contained 4.8 people a century ago. It contains only 2.6 people today.

A hundred years ago, people were tied to the land. The average American never traveled more than 20 miles from his little farm. Science has liberated men and women so that by car, ship and plane — and now rockets — we are incredibly mobile and becoming interplanetary people.

Our human environment has changed sharply. In 1900, the United States was 88 percent white, and the attitude of the courts and the lawmakers was that the rest of the population (which was mostly black) didn't count, or matter. Today, the United States is only 62 percent white, with that percentage dropping rapidly as this nation becomes far more diverse in race, culture and language.

And that casts a shadow on the century that begins tomorrow, because while we have wrought almost miraculous changes in medicine, science, agriculture and technology, we are scarcely more advanced today than we were a century ago in terms of human behavior.

We harnessed the power of the atom, and for half a century we have fashioned a nuclear stalemate, but we have no assurance that, at some fateful moment in the new century, we will not use our ghastly new weapons in a sort of mutual suicide.

Today, men hate and terrorize each other in ways more dreadful than they could or did in 1900. We might have escaped poverty and disease, but we show no signs of breaking free of our bigotries and our enmities.

Biomedical research might promise remarkable physical health in the next century, wiping out cancer, AIDS and other dread diseases, but so far we have no equivalent of research or hope in the field of mental health and human behavior.

We must hope that the 21st century will surprise us here, and in other areas, just as much as did the astonishing century that is ending.
